After listening to these reports, the procession committee got to work to draw up the protest which Miss Paul said would be filed to-morrow with the local authorities.

Medicine Woman

Medicine Woman, a member of the Sloux tribe of Indians, from the Pine Ridge reservation in South Dakota, added to the many reports of injury received in the parade. While riding in advance of the pilgrims, she re-ceived a bad injury to her knee from cavalry horse.

Medicine Woman referred with disgust to the fact that one of the moccasins she wore had been snatched from her foot by a jeering hoodlum.

"Our Indian men treat us with much tore respect than the whith man treats women," she said. At street corner meetings held today, which were addressed by Miss Elsle Hill, daughter of Congressman Hill, of Massachusetts; Miss Elizabeth Freeman, of New York; Mrs. Augusta Hughston, of New York, and others, references made to yesterday's out-rageous treatment of the women by the speakers, were received with Speight, of Mayfield, Ky., a student for several years at the Randolph-Macon Institute, died here this morning of peritonitis. Miss Speight was operated upon for appendictitis ten days ago, and was supposed to be well on the road to recovery. On Saturday complications set in, and in spite of the efforts made by three local physicians and Dr. Shelton Horsley, of Richmond, she gradually grew worse, and lingered until 11 o'clock. Her mother, summoned by wire on Saturday, was with her at the end, but her father, who made a desperate effort to reach here in time to see his daughter alive, lost his race with death by an hour.
